

Briefly, these are the main reasons I am running for CCDP Corresponding Secretary.

I see this position as vehicle to work on issues I care about. Like everyone, my top priority is economic growth and that means better public schools, better roads and better parks and cultural amenities to attract better jobs. It also means ensuring the revenue to accomplish this. As we are all buffeted by the winds of the real estate market it is important that neighborhoods are not decimated by incompatible zoning or land uses and that those responsible for the economic crisis are held accountable.

The county party does not have strength commensurate to its importance within the state party. We also need to strengthen our use of data collection and mining to better present our message and mobilize our resources. If the state party is not willing to cooperate we need to find a way to "go it alone."
